Father Stu Was A Lot Better Than The Movie

Have you seen the Mark Wahlberg and Mel Gibson film Father Stu? It's been getting a lot of buzz in the Catholic community, including a push by Bishop Robert Barron. Now, this isn't a movie review; just an effort to fill in some blanks. I won't spoil too much for those who haven't seen it, but let me tell you – Father Stuart Ignatius Long's life story was a lot better and more interesting than what's portrayed by Hollywood.

First of all, Fr. Stu wasn't the uneducated bumpkin with a Southern drawl as depicted. He was born in Seattle and grew up in Montana. The future priest graduated from Carroll College with a degree in English Literature and Writing before winning the 1985 Golden Gloves state boxing heavyweight title. From there he really did head off to Hollywood in search of illusive fame. But rather than taking dead end jobs while acting, he worked at the Norton Simon Museum in Pasadena for seven years where he became a manager. In fact, Stu underwent his St. Paul-like conversion while on the road to Damascus, not after an evening of binge drinking, but on his way home from the museum job.

It won't take viewers very long to notice the film's obsession with Stu's profanity is given equal time or more to its focus on his spirituality. Although I can't speak to the validity of that point, there is the misconception about Fr. Stu's impulsive path towards his vocation. Truth is it was lengthy and calculated. He taught three years at a Catholic high school in Mission Hills while determining if his calling was genuine. Only afterwards did he join Capuchin Friars in New York City, working in its poorest neighborhoods, before obtaining a master's degree in philosophy from Franciscan University in Steubenville, Ohio. He next received priestly formation for the Diocese of Helena, Montana, at Mount Angel Seminary in Oregon.

Much of what happened after Fr. Stu's ordination is true to what's in the movie. What isn't discussed, however, was his membership in the Knights of Columbus, and the key role Brother Knights played in supporting Stu during his most trying times. Still, I'm happy to have avoided reading anything about Fr. Stu's life and tribulations until after seeing the movie. It's great that his story was brought to the world's attention, but as is often the case with Hollywood, the film would have been much better had it stuck closer to his real life script rather than Movieland's fictionalized drama. I will add one final note for those who plan to see the movie, which I do recommend. Don't leave the theater before watching the end credits containing clips of the real Fr. Stu Long discussing his remarkable life.

Supreme Knight Delivers Care Packages to Ukraine & Poland

Supreme Knight Patrick Kelly traveled to Poland and Ukraine during Holy Week to meet with Knights and to witness and encourage their ongoing humanitarian efforts in response to the war. "What you are doing here really exemplifies that kind of courage that we are called to as Christian men," he told a group of Knights in Rava-Ruska, in western Ukraine. "It's the kind of courage that Father McGivney had when he founded the Knights in order to serve his parishioners who needed help."

Memorial Day

Monday, May 30th marks the nation's 154th official celebration of Memorial Day at Arlington National Cemetery. It was first proclaimed by General John Logan of the Grand Army of the Republic in 1868. The day is not one set aside to recognize veterans' service – that's on November 11th. Rather it honors men and women who died while serving in the U.S. military. First called Decoration Day, citizens bedecked the graves of fallen soldiers with flowers, flags, and wreaths after the Civil War. President Lyndon Johnson later proclaimed Waterloo, New York, as the "Birthplace of Memorial Day," 100 years later because the city began a formal commemoration of war dead on May 5, 1866.

Former Major General and future President James A. Garfield attended the first Decoration Day at Arlington on May 30, 1868, where he told the assembled: "We do not know one promise these men made, one pledge they gave, one word they spoke; but we do know they summed up and perfected, by one supreme act, the highest virtues of men and citizens. For love of country they accepted death, and thus resolved all doubts, and made immortal their patriotism and their virtue." Please honor them by flying your flag on this very special day that unites all Americans together. As is written in John 15:13 – "No one has greater love than this, to lay down one's life for one's friends."

Remembering Christopher Heppell

In a packed St Jerome Church long time friend of the family, Reverend Matthew D. Spahr presided over the funeral of Christopher D. Heppell, son of Brother David and Cathy Heppell. Christopher was one of Reverend Spahr's first baptisms ever performed after he was ordained more than 30 years ago. To bridge the circle of life, he reflects on the Gospel of Matthew (25:31-46), which gives us insight into the qualities and values that Jesus wants us to live by; the qualities and values that Christopher lived by: "For I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, a stranger and you welcomed me, naked and you clothed me, ill and you cared for me."

At an early age Christopher discovered he loved nature and became very grateful for everything God has given us in this world. With this passion for nature he started his own aquarium business and became an expert on growing and nurturing coral, one of God's many beautiful creations. In his daily life, when engaging with his customers, friends, family and people in general, he treated everyone he met while living Matthew's Gospel. He took the time to see and hear their needs, trying not to dismiss them in a world where people all too often do not have time for each other. In his short life here on earth he touched many hearts with the compassion and kindness of the teachings of Jesus Christ.

God bless Christopher Heppell and the entire Heppell Family.
